I believe that every coffee is made unique by its story and origin, as well as by the effort and dedication of each producer. For me, each coffee is special not only because of its diverse cup profiles, but also because of everything that has taken place for it to reach the cup.

The oldest variety on our farm is the Variedad Colombia. I remember it was planted by my father, and today it remains one of the most productive lots. Beyond its cup attributes, its cherries ripen to a distinctive yellow color and are known for their good size.
