ABOUT THIS COFFEE

The Dipilto – Jalapa Mountain range, located in northern Nicaragua, is one of the most emblematic coffee – growing regions in the country. This mountain range is the oldest geological formation in Nicaragua; this mountainous area, part of the Nueva Segovia department, is notable for its altitude, temperate climate, and fertile soils, ideal conditions for growing specialty coffees and one of the best examples of this is Buenos Aires farm.

Finca Buenos Aires is named after the community where it is located, on the Dipilto – Jalapa Mountain range, in northern Nicaragua, near of Honduras border (just some few kilometers). It has been a farm that has been passed down from generation to generation. Mr. Luis Emilio Valladarez's grandmother left it to him as an inheritance, and he has left it to his children today and has been with the family for more than 60 years. He's participated in the Cup of Excellence competition in 2008 and 2009, then in 2014 continuously until 2024. In all its participations its has obtained different awards, Maracaturra variety being the most outstanding.
