

ABOUT THIS COFFEE

Nestled within the lush mountains of Pijao, Quindío, La Selva is a specialty coffee farm where exceptional coffee and environmental stewardship go hand in hand. Surrounded by native forests, streams, and remarkable biodiversity, the farm operates under a natural agroforestry system that protects the landscape while creating ideal conditions for coffee cultivation.

Produced by Juan Diego Restrepo and Germán Abdelnur, this Chiroso represents years of dedication to quality, continuous learning, and conservation. The variety was introduced to the farm a decade ago from Urrao, Antioquia, and has adapted beautifully to the high elevations of Pijao, developing a distinctive cup profile marked by florality, sweetness, and bright malic acidity.

The coffee grows between 1,500 and 1,800 meters above sea level on volcanic soils rich in organic matter.
